Dear UL faculty, students and staff,

The University has completed its Compliance Certification for its 2010 SACS-COC accreditation reaffirmation, and the report and all supporting materials can be easily accessed by anyone on this website. The following image shows the structure and all the pull-down menus on the Website.

The mainstay of our reaffirmation, the Compliance Certification, consists of three sections (Section one, the Principle of Integrity, is not addressed in the report):

Section 2, Core Requirements: these are essential functions of the University; the University must meet all Core Requirements fully or it will not be accredited

Section 3, Comprehensive Standards: an in-depth presentation of how the different parts of the University operate and strive toward their goals; SACS can make recommendations for improvement in these areas and monitor the University for progress

Section 4, Federal Requirements: demonstration that we meet all federal requirements

Introduction to our Quality Enhancement Plan, the initiative chosen by the University as part of our reaffirmation to improve student learning
Clicking on a section of the compliance certification brings up a menu of sub-sections; clicking any of these links takes the reader to a Web version of UL Lafayette’s response to that standard. Supporting document links within the Compliance Certification sections take readers to the same local and live documents as the Compliance Certification on the USB drive. All other resources are identical.

To ensure long-term functionality, most pages from the UL Lafayette website offered as supporting documentation are not live pages, but rather off-line images stored locally and linked as documents. Many of the links on these off-line web pages will nonetheless function and take the reader to live sub-pages, provided the computer in use is connected to the Internet. Off-campus links are live and will only function when connected to the internet, but for each live link, an alternative, local copy is provided should the reader not have internet access.

A Document Directory presents all the supporting documents referenced in the Compliance Certification in alphabetical order. A separate list of the units, offices, and departments involved in each standard is also provided.

Assessments can be accessed through the linked checkmarks in the Assessment Checklist presented as supporting document 6 in section 3.3.1.1 and referenced elsewhere in the Compliance Certification. Reviewers are also invited to inspect the University’s Assurance of Learning Moodle site, which houses the University’s assessment process, including announcements, resources, and gathering and sharing assessments, which are organized by College and Department. Reviewers will receive a password to access the Moodle site.

The Reference Documents section contains essential University documents used in the Compliance Certification for user convenience.

It is hoped that the campus community finds UL Lafayette’s presentation of its 2010 Reaffirmation materials convenient and easy to use. Should you encounter any technical difficulties with UL Lafayette’s SACS-COC reaffirmation materials, please contact at any time:
